

Dear Daniel:

While working with our staff, Samantha's conversation by her receipt of text messages. In conversation to key a response, the constant interruptions caused some of our employees to compromise on matters. Our managers cited several occasions where they repeat a statement made just before receiving a text message.

Samantha is obviously quite good at her job, she is so proficient in evaluating companies that I can trust her to be completely confidential so that the results will be for her and for us.

Ends on pleasant note that seeks to add credibility to preceding negatives.
